The Australian Research Data Commons (ARDC)

Craig officially commenced his role on the ARDC Board. The Australian Research Data Commons (ARDC) is a national, collaborative effort to design and implement a single, open and sustainable research data environment that will enable the nation to maximise the value of its research data and support the ability of researchers to do world-class research.

Data and Software Carpentries

This year's theme incorporates the distilling, repackaging and demonstrating the value of data and software. This is a significant milestone for the ARDC.
