

New websites launched

2016 has seen changes to our websites. The ANU Gateway project has delivered new ANU Library, ANU Archives and University Records websites, and content from the Copyright and Freedom of Information websites has been moved to the services section on the main ANU site. A new ANU Press website will be launched shortly.

Work will continue to update and correct the information displayed on the websites. If you need any assistance finding information please do not hesitate to contact us.

Electronic Records Management System (ERMS)

The University's ERMS is the place for the official records of the University. We continue to offer training for users and Power users and provide information and support online. We will be providing more information throughout this year to help you get the most from the system.

Lost and overdue Library material

The University provides a collection of resources through the Library to support education and research. Maintaining the collection so it can be used by current and future ANU students and staff is an important activity for the Library and the community. Lost books and other material may be very difficult or impossible to replace which reduces the material available to all at ANU. One of the important mechanisms to ensure the return of material is fines.

The proposal to increase the fines was subject to consultation after the increase in fines this year. Taking into account the focus groups held by PARSA and ANUSA, the feedback from the University community and submissions, the daily fee has been adjusted to $6 per day. The Library will work with ANUSA and PARSA to seek to reduce the number of lost books and other material. Anyone with a book that is due is reminded that unless the item has been recalled the item can be renewed online, returned, or the Library contacted to avoid fines.

Upcoming exhibition: Living, working & playing on Mt Stromlo

This year ANU celebrates its 70th anniversary and throughout this year our exhibitions will feature many aspects of ANU and our people. The first exhibition in the Menzies Library will look at life on Mt Stromlo, from the building of the small community, to the day-to-day life of the families and researchers who called it home. Do pop in and see material from our collections, particularly the ANU Archives, and share your memories or create new ones.

ORCID: managing your research identity

Open Researcher and Contributor ID (ORCID) is a global initiative that provides researchers with a free, unique identifier that can automatically link and attribute your research activities and outputs to you, as well as from Scopus and Web of Science.

Free training sessions are available from the Library to help you register for an ORCID, and to answer any questions about unique research identifiers.

Review of ANU Press

ANU Press will be reviewed this year. The Review Panel, which will meet in July, consists of Sir Geoffrey Crossick, Director, AHRC Cultural Value Project and Distinguished Professor of Humanities, School of Advanced Study, University of London; Amy Brand, Director at The MIT Press, and Andrew Stammer, CSIRO Publishing. All members of the community will be given the opportunity to make submissions and attend focus groups. Information is now available about the Review of the ANU Press.

Annual report

Our annual report is now online. In addition to highlighting our achievements in 2015, a list of the resources cancelled by the Library in 2015 is also online.

Featured ANU Press book

China & ANU: Diplomats, adventurers, scholars
By William Sima, co-published with Australian Centre on China in the World.

»Download this title